NON-INTRODUCTORY LIBERAL ARTS COURSES

All SOM undergraduates are required to complete a minimum of three non-introductory liberal arts courses. A Harpur College course is considered non-introductory if according to the Binghamton University Undergraduate Bulletin it meets one of four criteria:

1. The course has a prerequisite course. As an example, PSYC 220 is non-intro because it requires completion of PSYC 111 (or equivalent) prior to enrollment.
2. The course is designated by the offering department to be an intermediate or advanced course. As an example, Intermediate Spanish I (SPAN 211) is considered to be non-intro, even if the student has taken no other spanish language courses at the college level. Courses from History, Sociology and Political Science numbered 200 or higher also meet this criterion.
3. The course is "Not open to Freshmen" or "Open to Sophomores" or "Open to Juniors and Seniors Only". Check the notes column in the Schedule of Courses.
4. Any Harpur College course numbered 300 or higher is non-intro.

One four-credit hour Harpur College course or two two-credit hour courses which are both non-introductory may be used to satisfy one of the three course requirements. All other courses that do not meet one of these four criteria are deemed to be introductory.

Transfer courses are evaluated separately and require a course prerequisite to be considered non-introductory.
